Director

Angie McKenzie (Director): Owner and director, Miss Angie is in her 22nd year of teaching here at Cody Center for the Performing Arts. Her enthusiasm for dance and the arts along with her friendly spirit extend far beyond the walls of the studio. Angie found her love for dancing at the age of 5 at Ladonna's School of Dance in Glendive, MT. Through the years she has studied many forms of dance including ballet, pointe, tap, modern, jazz and hip hop. As a young adult, Angie decided to pursue a career in teaching dance because she always wanted to share the joy that comes with dancing and the beauty that it creates. She began as a student teacher with Ladonna Jimson and then later started teaching under the direction of Cindy Aune at CCPA. After training and teaching for 3 years, Angie purchased the studio in 2004 and became the director. She is always learning and working on her dance curriculum to help students grow in a way that is engaging and entertaining. Along with her love of dance Angie also enjoys cooking, gardening, hiking, fishing and any time spent with her family. Angie's husband Bryan works for the BLM in Cody and they have two boys Bradley and Stanley.
